

Virtual Security Expertise vCISO Services

There is a zero-percent unemployment rate in the cybersecurity field. So, it's difficult and expensive to attract, recruit, and retain the qualified cybersecurity resources your organization needs.

Cybersecurity and a CISO

Threats such as highly publicized ransomware outbreaks are increasing in cadence, scope, and financial impact. And the talent necessary to combat such threats is scarce and expensive, especially when it comes to a CISO — the security conscience of every organization.

The Quest Solution

Responsible for the protection of an organization's technology and information assets, the CISO is a critical internal information security resource. Trouble is, there aren't enough to go around. Quest's virtual Chief Information Security Officer (vCISO) solution can help you overcome this scarcity of available labor and avoid the added overhead of hiring, training, or backfilling a permanent CISO.

Going Virtual

Our vCISO team is comprised of experienced security experts that are well-versed in all areas of risk management, so we're able to provide customizable solutions that fit your needs. Quest's vCISO can work with your organization from 4–80 hours per month.

Quest's vCISO provides:

- A dedicated, trusted senior security expert
- A knowledgeable voice in executive/board/committee leadership meetings for security guidance
- Hands-on consulting for security policy, process, and procedural development
- Security compliance management
- Expert review of risk assessments and consultation on risk mitigation prioritization
- Security mentorship and training to all levels of staff (from engineer to executive)
- Independent advice on third-party risk management and security development life cycle
- 24/7/365 access to Quest's Incident Response Team to address catastrophic events
- Ability to translate complex technical security details into business action

With Quest's vCISO, you can overcome the market's current shortage in critical cybersecurity talent and fortify your organization's security posture without the added expense of a full-time resource.
